Preamble

What is history and what is architectural theory and how it is important to articulate within the context of contemporary architectural paradigm. The training program primarily explores the principles, ideological position (theoretical) and its implication on architecture that has shaped the cities and built environment.

Architectural position is an approach that desired to revitalize the way we shape and view life, art, politics, and science. It is imperative to understand and question in theoretical sense the moral codes that societies laid out in the past in order to re-position the new codes.

The training program explores the method to dissect the "theory" conceptually as well as contextually & see its significance in the context of architecture & urbanism.

The course contains four sections. The first part shall elaborate the process and situation (social and cultural methods) that has shaped architectural productions. The second part shall establish the relationship with the project and production in architecture. The third part shall emphasize the work on variation in theoretical approaches. The last section shall examine the emerging architectural practices and discussion of regionalism.
